PALESTINE, TEXAS, DECEMBER 3, 1903.

A FAMILIAR STORY.

A man in the Gustine neighborhood was in town this week. A year ago he was a prosperous farmer, owning one of the best places in the county; but he had his price for his property as most people have, a man came along and offered it to him and he took it. Of course he had made no arrangements for a home elsewhere and he was adrift with the earnings of a lifetime in his pocket. He went west in search of pasture land; but he did not like the location there after trying it a year, and is back in Commanche county hunting a home with half of his money gone. There is a moral to this incident and it is this: Don't sell out at any price unless you are prepared to do better at once. Why should I sell my home and business at twice its actual value if I have no reasonable expectation of doing better; why sell at all on uncertainties. There is another moral pointed by the story and it is, that no one should leave Commanche county under any circumstances.-Commanche Chief.

That thing has happened in Anderson county. Any man who has a good home in any country should think and plan well before tting go. And this is especially in East Texas.

LOCAL politics will not break out above the surface very much until after the holidays. However, there is a strong undercurrent of politics running in the city and county, and there will be enough candidates to go around beyond doubt.

MIZPAH, Texas, Dec. 1. has come and gone, and we think change price. the people can feel truly thankyou only pay for picking five clusions. But we believe this thing of hard times in East Texas is bosh.

We notice a move in our sister county, Henderson, to have the public roads worked by taxation. This, we think, is a move in the right direction, and what is the saddest thing to me is that Anderson county can't take up these things and demonstrate that we are in the front in progress, and not wait until everybody else improves and then take up the idea and advance simply because we are forced to. Let us get up and be doing.

An Interesting Letter on This Important Matter From an Anderson County Teacher.

The interest of the patrons and pupils of Anderson county, or some parts of it, have been greatly menaced recently by failing to get the old text book exchanged for the new.

This is a serious injustice to the patrons of the schools using these books. When the company contracted to give the people advantages of the exchange prices, they contracted to establish an agent in every county from whom the book can be secured in exchange Kind Readers.-Thanksgiving for the old one at a given ex-

Now why can't the people avail ful for their harvest if they will themselves of this advantage? only consider and compare it with Certain book dealers in Palestine years of the past. Only a few say they represent The University years ago a bale of cotton would Publishing Company of Dallas, bring from $15 to $20. You then who supply the State with the perhaps had ten bales of good three geographies. You can excotton and realized $200, and paid change the old geography there for the picking of ten bales, if it is in good condition. This This year you have just half the company can have no other agent amount, five bales, and that is here who are compelled to exthe same as $250 in cash, and change books when presented.

Mr. Swift at Palestine handles bales. Any one can draw con- these geographies, but says he represents none other of the text books as agent. While a letter from L. V. LaTaste, general manager for Silver Burdett & Co., who hold a contract for the supply of our composition and higher physology, tells us that W. E. Swift and the Old Town Drug Store are their local agents here.

Another, Ginn & Co., writes 3 that W. E. Swift & Co., represent them as agents for our 2 adopted 4th and 5th readers, and $ U. S. History.

From B. K. Benson we are advised that W. E. Swift, Moore & Forbes and Louis Durr & Son, handle the books furnished by the State, which are Hydes Practical Lessons in English, Hydes Practical English Grammar and S ton & Kimbrough's Higher and Lower Arithmetic. But Mr. Benson does not say these men are his agents here.

Dallas, that W. E. Swift is their agent here, and that the Old Town Drug Store also handles their books-the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd. Readers, but fails to say that the latter firm represents their books as agent.

Texas Drug Company who supplies us with the Wheeler's Primer and our Lesson in Penmanship, writes that the Old Town Drug Store and W. E. Swift are their !! agents at Palestine.

The Attorney General in a letter on this matter writes:

"Of course you understand that a text book dealer who owns the books, as some of them do, I understand have purchased them outright, is not compelled to exchange the books for the old book formerly in use." "The law requires," he continues, "each con cern to whom was awarded a contract to establish in the county a depository, at which exchange could be made, and if you have made application, or know any one else who has made application to the depository for the exchange of books, and have been refused, please advise me of the fact, and let me know who made the application, and to whom the application was made. '

With these facts as a premise pefore us, what can be a rational conclusion?
